REPORT OF PRINCIPAL AND SCHOOL IMPROVEMENT COUNCIL

For the 2002-03 school year, Ridge View High School continued to experience increased enrollment. Ridge View's faculty is the foundation of our strong instructional program. We have 18 teachers who have earned National Board Certification and 19 teachers who currently are pursuing this distinction. In response to our growing population, we have continued to create smaller learning communities and programs within our high school. Our initial year with ninth grade academies has been very successful. The Academy for Science and Humanities, the Academy for Civic Engagement, and the Academy for Technology have joined our four schools-within-a-school (Honors School, AVID school, e-School, and the School for the Arts) as premier programs for personalizing instruction in a large high school. The staff of our academies has worked to maintain strong parent-teacher communication; strong faculty-faculty communication; consistent expectations across classes; and improved traffic patterns within the school. Our ninth grade students have benefited from seminars which combined activities unique to each academy with activities designed to ease the transition from middle to high school.

Ridge View High was a finalist for recognition as Carolina First's Palmetto's Finest. We received a 2003 Palmetto Gold and Silver Award from the SC Department of Education, reflecting our school's results and excellent rating on our annual report card. Ridge View was named as a Red Carpet school, due to diligent efforts of our school Improvement Council, students and staff. Our faculty continues to be represented at state and national conferences and programs. For 2002-03, Ridge View was home to 22 Palmetto Fellows, three National Merit Finalists; one National Merit Semifinalist; two National Achievement Finalists; one National Achievement Semifinalist; and one National Hispanic Scholar. Our principal, Dr. Sharon Buddin, received the Order of the Palmetto in recognition of her educational leadership. Ridge View's band earned second place in state competition, and we are proud of our state individual girls' tennis champion and our first state individual wrestling champion. Our student council earned honor council status with the state student council organization. Ridge View High School continues to generate opportunities for students to learn and grow in a safe environment.
